

GOVERNOR

Brian Stillings

I am pleased to introduce myself as a governor. I became a governor at Molescroft Primary School during the summer term 2017. I am a relatively new governor and am enjoying learning more about the school.

I have had a long relationship with the school through my career in the world of education and, more recently, through my child who attends the school.

I have been married to my wife Hannah, who is a teacher, for ten years. I am also a long suffering but devoted supporter of Hull City.

My present job is a school improvement adviser for the East Riding. My principal role is to both support and challenge schools. Alongside this, I am responsible for the induction of new headteachers. I am also a serving lead inspector for Ofsted.

Previously, I have held two posts as a head teacher and have taught across the full age range in primary schools. I have also taught Physical Education on an initial teacher training programme.

Governors make up the largest body of volunteers in England. It is a real privilege to be involved as a governor at Molescroft. Throughout my career, I have been driven each and every day to ensure children get the best opportunities to learn and succeed. I firmly believe that education is the key to success in life. Education gives us a broad perspective on life. In addition, teachers and adults in school play a vital role and make a lasting impact on the lives of children.

I believe education plays a role in preparing children for tomorrow's world. We are not quite sure what tomorrow's world will look like and the jobs our children will do in the future. I know that I have a part to play as a governor to ensure the school continues to be a special place and prepare the children for the future.

It is exciting to play a part in fulfilling this through Molescroft's unique vision of, "Everybody Cares, Everybody Learns and Everybody Matters."
